1. SKORZENY's Introduction to WERWOLF

In Sep 44, SKORZENY received a written communication from HIMMLER's adjutant, BRANDT, to the effect that Gruppenfuhrer PRUETZMANN was carrying out special orders (Sonderauftrag) by HIMMLER, and that SKORZENY was to assist him.

2. Meetings with PRUETZMANN

A few weeks later, PRUETZMANN called on SKORZENY in FRIEDENTHAL for the purpose of explaining the WERWOLF scheme to him, and formulating the basis of their collaboration.

Altogether, SKORZENY saw PRUETZMANN four to five times between late Sep 44 and late Jan 45. The meetings took place partly at FRIEDENTHAL, partly in PRUETZMANN's HQ, a special train in a brick yard near KOENIGSWUSTERHAUSEN. They met once in the ADLON Hotel in BERLIN. PRUETZMANN's staff attended a weapons demonstration in Nov or Dec 44 put on by the Fuehrungs Stab of SKORZENY's SS Jagd Verbände on the POTSDAM training grounds. SKORZENY did not attend any of PRUETZMANN's staff meetings, but met some of his associates individually (See Personalities).

During one of their meetings PRUETZMANN told SKORZENY that his last refuge would be the LUEBECK Bay, as he knew the area well.

3. Organization

The plan, as outlined by PRUETZMANN, was as follows. He had been ordered by HIMMLER to build up an organization to work behind the enemy lines. It was to be called WERWOLF after the hero of a LOENS novel about the Thirty Years' War. He planned to visit all Gaue to confer with Gauleiters, HSSPF's and other Party leaders on recruiting and organizational problems. One man per Gau (preferably a suitable Wehrmacht officer, as PRUETZMANN wanted a military core around which to build his essentially civilian organization) was to be charged with the recruiting.

PRUETZMANN also intended to confer with industrialists on the possibility of planting saboteurs in factories which could not be evacuated.

WERWOLF personnel was to operate in Gruppen of three or six men directed by a Gruppen Fuehrer. The number of Gruppen to be organized depended on the time available. PRUETZMANN did not state any minimum numbers. He told SKORZENY in Oct or Nov 44, however, that 60 - 70 Gruppen Fuehrer from the Rhineland were ready for training. At that time five to six Gruppen were operating in East Prussia.

During their second meeting in Oct 44, PRUETZMANN told SKORZENY that the organization had operated with some success in East Prussia. He reported difficulties in the Rhineland, however, mainly because the HSSPF could not get along with the Gau Leiter.

4. Communications

The plans called for the establishment of an efficient communications net, allowing for all WERWOLF activities to be centrally controlled by Dienst Stelle PRUETZMANN. Targets were to be numbered to simplify the issuing of orders by radio. PRUETZMANN told SKORZENY about an underground telephone net in the Rhineland, which was partly out of use. He intended to request the services of a telephone specialist from the Reichs Post Ministerium to operate it for WERWOLF purposes.

5. Supplies

Each Gruppe was to receive ration for 60 days. Each was to have two small-arms, and 15 - 20 lbs of explosives. PRUETZMANN intended to install underground depots. SKORZENY told him, this could be done in forest areas like East Prussia. He advised against it in inhabited areas, as the danger of betrayal was too great.

6. SKORZENY's Participation

SKORZENY was asked to help train and equip the organization. He states that he offered only limited assistance, as the activation of his SS Jagd Verbaende was still in progress, forcing him to look after his own interests first.

He offered to train only the Gruppen Fuehrer. They in turn were to instruct their men.

He was unable to supply FRUETZMANN with rations, and advised him to get explosives directly from the factories (W.S.G., DYNAMIT A.G., NOBEL A.G.) and from Army stores. In order to eliminate transportation problems he suggested that as far as possible supplies be drawn near the places where they were to be used. He promised his help in supplying the organization with fuses and captured enemy weapons. (He estimates that 100 - 150 Sten guns were released by the Jagd Verbaende Fuehrungs Stab.)

In Oct 44 after his first conferences with FRUETZMANN the following steps were taken:

- a. He told his I-b, (Supply Officer) H/Stuf GERHARDT (see Personalities), to co-operate with FRUETZMANN's I-b (see Personalities) as much as possible, avoiding extravagant promises. Under no circumstances were Jagd Verbaende interests to be jeopardized. In case of special requests (special fuses, weapons with silencers) SKORZENY's consent was to be asked. In no case were more than 10 - 20% of Jagd Verbaende stocks to be handed out.
- b. A teletype message went to all Mil D Leitstellen, that FRUETZMANN's representatives were to be assisted as far as possible without jeopardizing own interests. Each Leitstelle was to lend one instructor to the WERWOLF organization. A limited amount of equipment was to be released upon request. SKORZENY states that all supply matters were handled by Mil D/T, Maj EHRLICH in charge.
- c. A teletype message was sent to all SS Jagd Verbaende announcing the arrival of FRUETZMANN's representatives who were to be given limited assistance. No equipment was to be released, as all supply matters were handled centrally through the Fuehrungs Stab. Each Jagd Verbaend was to furnish one instructor to the FRUETZMANN organization. Under no circumstances was their own training to be impeded. All difficulties were to be reported to FRIEDENTHAL.

He states that reports arrived from all Jagd Verbaende complaining about exorbitant demands by the WERWOLF representatives. His orders were to turn them down.

SKORZENY gives the following details on the participation of his units in the WERWOLF training program:

- a. He estimates that 300 - 400 WERWOLF recruits (10% women) were trained at the Kampf Schule of Jagd Verbaend Nord West in NEUSTRELITZ between Oct 44 and Mar 45. The courses lasted five to eight days, and included instruction in shooting, sabotage without equipment, and fundamental facts about explosives. FRUETZMANN complained on several occasions that the training was insufficient, and requested that more details be covered. SKORZENY told him, that within the given time limit this was impossible.

- b. Jagd Verband Sued West sent two instructors on TD to conduct WERWOLF training in a HJ camp N of STUTTGART.
- c. Jagd Verband Sued Ost did not participate, as the WERWOLF liaison men could not get along with its CO, O/Stubaf BENESCH.
- d. He does not know of any participation by Jagd Verband Ost. The unit was destroyed nr HOHENSALZ in Jan 45.
- e. PAK 202 or 203, Hptm KIRN in charge (attached to Army Group Mitte) detached one or two instructors to train WERWOLF recruits in Silesia.
